++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Sunny intervals but also some scattered showers.

Today:

Many areas starting dry, the clearer areas rather chilly with the odd mist patch. Warming up with some sunshine this morning but scattered showers breaking out by afternoon, especially over England, the odd heavier one. Feeling pleasant in sunnier breaks.

Tonight:

Showers fading during the evening. Some cloudier areas persisting across England, where it will be mild but elsewhere clear spells may lead to rather chilly, possibly misty conditions.

Wednesday:

Some warm sunny spells at times for most areas. However, showery rain spreads across northwestern parts, before showers develop more widely by afternoon, heavy in places with the odd thunderstorm.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:

Initially dry in the east, but becoming widely unsettled with showers, locally heavy with a risk of thunder, and some sunny spells. Improving over southern areas later Friday. Average temperatures.
